Valuable Wall Paper

Chicago, Ill.—When stocks nose-dived in the depression, the Union League Club of Chicago invited members to contribute "worthless" stock certificates to paper a private dining room. It took $1,000,000 worth to cover the walls. So many stocks have now "come back" that the club is soaking the certificates off the walls, returning them to the former owners.

Big Velocity Tester

Langley Field, Va. — Scientists studied the new concrete and steel tunnel for testing airplane resistance. An 8000 horsepower motor drives an air-stream at more than 100 miles per hour, proves that an airplane's skin friction is reduced 5% by eliminating rivet heads; so that above 575 miles per hour present wing designs lose much of their lifting power.

Model Revolutions in Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia—Politicians who have come to connect South American revolutions with gun-fire and assassination, marvel at Bolivians' restraint. After turning out of office President Jose Luis Tejada Sovero and his liberal government without shot, Col. David Toro, 37-year-old Provisional President, threw out a junta that seized the reins during his temporary absence and set up a new cabinet. No shots, no deaths, no injuries.

Bankers Get Railing

Washington, D. C. — National Banks and Federal Reserve members now have a ruling from J. F. O'Connor, Controller of the Currency, on what securities they may buy for investment. No bonds in default as to principle or interest are permitted; nor are bonds "in which the investment characteristics are predominantly speculative."

Malars in the Capital

Washington, D. C. — The Secretary of Labor announced an employment increase of 225,000 workers in April representing a payroll of $4,200,000. During the first four months of the year exports totaled 12%, imports 17%. The signing of a reciprocal treaty with Iceland, the fourteenth pact of its kind negotiated by the present Administration.

MEMORIAL DAY

Cy Warman in Indianapolis News

Gather the garlands rare today,
Snow-white roses and roses red;
Gather the fairest flowers of May,
Heap them up on the graves of dead.
Gladden the graves of the noble dead.

Pile them high as the soldiers were Piled on the field where they fought and fell;
They will rejoice in their new place there

Today, as they walk where the fragrant air
Is sweet with the scent of asphalt.

Many a time, I've heard it said,
They fell so thick where the battles were,
Their hot blood rippled, and running red,
Ran out like a mill from the drifted dead

Staining the heath and the daisies
there.

This day the friends of the soldiers keep,
And they will keep it through all the years,
To the silent city where soldiers sleep

Will come with flowers, to watch and weep
And water the garlands with their tears.

BACCALAUREATE EXERCISES TO BE HELD SUNDAY, MAY 31

Baccalaureate Exercises for the graduating class of Gould Academy will be held in the Congregational Church on Sunday, May 31, at 2:30 o'clock. Daylight Saving Time. The address will be given by the Reverend Hilda L. Ives of Portland. Special music will be presented by 37 members of the Girls' Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Ruth Leavengood. The first of these selections will be "Praise Ye The Father" by Charles Gounod; and the second, "Bless The Lord" by Michael Ippolitoff-Ivanoff.

ATTENTION GOULD ACADEMY ALUMNI

All former Gould students (with wives or husbands) who plan to attend the Centennial Reunion Banquet next Thursday, June 4 are urged to make their reservations immediately with Miss Maxine Clough, secretary of the Alumni Association. The parade will form after the Commencement exercises in the morning, and dinner is scheduled for 12:45 sharp in the tent to be erected on the Athletic Field.

Arrangements are being completed for group meetings of former students to be held after the Centennial Exercises in the tent Mrs. Emma VanDenKerckhoven is chairman of a committee who will invite to those who attended prior to 1900. This group will assemble in the Principal's Home on the campus. Another group consisting of students from 1900-1920 will meet in the reception room at the Students' Home Mrs. Barbara Lyon will act as chairman in serving this group. Mrs. Beth Chapman's committee will see that the third group 1920-1936 is served in the reception room at Holden Hall.

It will add to the pleasure of the day if every former student will act as a committee of one to urge his classmates to be present to renew friendships in these group gatherings. Each one may have friends in all the groups. Be sure to look them up.

ANNOUNCEMENT

During the month of June my office hours will be from 1 to 3 every afternoon except Saturday. Evening office hours only on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 7 to 8 morning office hours by appointment only and no hours Sunday.

LEIGHTON HOME AT GILEAD BURNED WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The residence of Irving Leighton at Gilead was burned to the ground last night. The fire was well underway when discovered about 11 o'clock and nothing was saved from the house. The Berlin and Gorham fire departments were called. They made a quick run but the house was nearly ready to fall in on their arrival. They obtained water from the creek near Herbert Cole's and drained it about dry.

The Charles H. Cole place close by was saved with the aid of a hand hose and favorable breeze which carried most of the cinders across the Cole lawn.

The cause of the fire is not known. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

CORPORATION ASSESSORS APPOINT POLICEMAN

The Assessors of the Bethel Village Corporation met Saturday and appointed Perry C. Lapham as night watchman for the summer. Mr. Lapham began his new duties that night.

OFFICERS ELECTED GEO. A. MUNDT POST

At the meeting of the American Legion Tuesday evening the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Commander—Milo McAllister
1st Vice Com. Lloyd Laxton
2d Vice Com. Roy Moore
Adj. Eugene VanDenKerckhoven
Finance Office—John McErve
Chaplain—Henry Bennett
Sgt.-at-Arms—Chester Chapman

PROTESTS ARTICLE FIVE IN CORPORATION WARRANT

"A small town attempt at Hitlerism, is what Gordon E. Lathrop, perennial candidate for Selectman, calls Article 5 as it is written into the Corporation Warrant. "Plainly," he continues, "the Assessors want no change in their plan. You can either vote for it or vote against it. Any changes or amendments must be made by unanimous consent and a single vote of dissent would put an end to them."

"This article is an important one involving cooperation with the Town in fire fighting. It rightfully should have been written 'To see what action the Corporation will take to cooperate with the Town in fire fighting' and anything as definite as the plan outlined in the warrant article could have been made as a suggestion for discussion and change."

The whole application in the article is that the Corporation and Town are separate entities, which is not true. Just as surely as the residents of the Corporation are assessed around 60% of the Town tax, they are residents of the Town. The warrant article offers free use of Town equipment to those who are to pay 60% for it! The Corporation residents will pay 60% of the cost of fighting fires in the Corporation, 60% of the cost of fighting fires outside the Corporation; 100% of the Corporation's share of maintaining the apparatus; and 60% of the Town's share.

"The most economical and least confusing method of fire protection is for the Town to take over all fire fighting activity, with the possible exception that the Corporation retain one hose cart and skeleton crew for emergency. The Town should buy the equipment, maintain it, and form a company of ten or fifteen from the more active members of the present Corporation fire companies. The cost would be assessed against the whole town (of which we repeat, the Corporation pays 60%). The total cost for town maintenance and one fire company would surely be less than the present Corporation payroll for its three units." That is the argument presented by Mr. Lathrop.

CARELESS BRUSH BURNER CONVICTED

On May 1, 1936, Harland Kimball of Gilead, built a fire to burn some brush which had resulted from a land clearing operation carried on during the early spring. After the brush was burned, a large heap of ashes and smoldering cinders was left. Mr. Kimball didn't believe in securing a fire permit before burning because he considered it a nuisance.

Camp, Supt. Irving J. Drew and Acting Assistant District Ranger

Following the case officials of the U. S. Forest Service stated that both Maine and New Hampshire had enacted laws forbidding the burning of slash or debris without permits from town fire warden. It was pointed out that careless brush burners may be held liable for damages caused by such fires and the expenses of fighting them.

exceptionally strong gust of wind came up and carried some hot coals from the fire into the adjacent dry grass. The grass burned rapidly and the fire was soon in the woods. As soon as Mr. Kimball arrived at the fire he saw it was beyond his control and immediately summoned aid from West Bethel.

District Ranger Henry C. Waldo of the White Mountain National Forest arrived at the scene of the fire as soon as possible. After making an inspection he decided that the case was actionable. Trial Justice Daniels of Gilead was interviewed and a warrant for the arrest of Harland Kimball was drawn up.

The trial was held at Gilead on May 4 with Trial Justice Daniels presiding. The plaintiff, District Ranger Waldo, and two witnesses

GOULD 14-BETHEL 5

Gould Academy defeated the Bethel team of the Androscoggin Valley League last Thursday by a 14-5 score. The winners scored in every inning but the first.

Browne held the Town team to 6 hits but he passed six men and hit two which kept him in considerable difficulty. Morgan, losing pitcher, was hit for nine safe blows including a double by Daniels and a home run by Young. He also passed four men and hit three batters.

Eddy Robertson and Bob Browne were the only men on either team to get more than one hit. They each secured two singles.

The losers started a rally in the last inning which was cut short by double play, Browne to Littlehale to Robertson.

GOULD LOSES 12-INNING GAME

In a 12-inning ball game, Whitney, South Paris ace pitcher, outlasted three Gould hurlers to win 6-5. Going into the final inning leading 5-4, Coach Anderson had to replace Quimby because of a sore arm. Keniston, who has been pitching great relief ball was the victim of a ninth inning home run which tied the score.

In the eleventh Keniston had to be replaced due to an ailing arm caused by the severe cold weather. Whitney, who relieved him, retired the first three men in the eleventh, but in the 12th Briggs tripled with only one out and scored on Hubbard's bunt to win the ball game.

It looked like another victory for Gould the way Quimby was pitching and it was a tough break for the Academy nine when he had to be replaced with a one run lead.

Briggs with a triple and two singles led the winners' attack while Stearns and Hubbard each hit home runs. Eddy Robertson and Quimby were the only Gould players to get more than one hit; each getting two singles. Dick Young, R. Browne, and Daniels had real set backs in their batting averages to put E. Robertson now out in front with an average of .352.

CHAPTER VIII

THE more Barry thought of it, the more certain he became that the Judge's story, and the revelations in Harlem, removed the only reason for questioning Harwood's hypothesis. When the divorce action was filed, Kelly had promised not to see Betty Barclay again. That promise had induced the withdrawal of the petition. And then Betty Barclay had phoned, while Kelly was out, and just as Mrs. Kelly was going to Harwood's own words, Mrs. Kelly "went wild." Failing to get legal counsel, she failed to Harlem, and there she got "madder and madder." Just after midnight, she drove home, and found Kelly alone, drunk, and with the accumulated wrath engendered by two trying interviews. There were words, and a handy decanter. The design began being almost too nearly perfect.

He found Peggy doing some mending in her dingy room. She had lost flesh, and seemed to be always staring at nothing. "It's Jacky," she confided in Barry. "I'm worried about him."

The youngster looked pale and ill. "Look here, Peg; will you have lunch with me tomorrow at the Astor? I want you to meet somebody."

"Miss Hambridge?"

"Yes."

"She'd turn up her nose at me like an elephant reaching for peanuts."

"I don't think so. Anyway, I want you to know each other."

The appointment was made at last—one click and Barry called Pat.

"Well, the trail's hot, all right," he told her about it.

"I don't dare over the wire. You know, operations come in and lunch with me?"

"Why?"

"Tomorrow at one."

Pat was eagerly anxious to hear his news and there was no other way. But, if Pat's nose remained still when she learned she was to encounter Peggy, her mouth was frightened. "Why? What have I in common with this girl?"

"Well," Barry answered, dully, "you're keeping her husband in prison."

Pat flushed.

"You can't see anything for that, don't you? What's she got to be like so high on about? This girl Mrs. John Charles Ridder, Jr. you know?"

"I'm not going high hat, really, naturally, just now, I don't feel much like meeting strangers. It's perfectly stranger with whom I have no community of interest."

Laughing together, however, it soon became evident that there was a "community of interest." Pat warned to the paled cheeks and fearful for her husband's life, as Pat was fearful for her father. Both heard Barry's account of his interviews with regard to Mrs. Kelly.

"It seems pretty conclusive," Pat said.

"I never thought of that dame—I mean, woman," Peg added. "Would that get Jack off quick?"

Barry explained his understanding that, if there were definite proof of another person's having committed a crime, anyone in custody was released immediately. "The district attorney covers for a dismissal of the indictment, I believe," he told them.

"Yes!" Peggy said, with the tears in her eyes.

Pat was no fool, and she found herself repeating and liking this "right club leader" who was Mrs. Ridder, after all. "Wherever the girl might have been, it was the tears beginning to dissolve the beads that stirred Pat. She had never seen anyone cry that way before—cry with her lips twisted into a smile.

"You've certainly stuck to your husband," Pat observed.

"Why not? When you really love anybody, you don't care what they do, or have done, or what they are. It's what they are to you that counts. You're not thinking what you're going to get, but what you're going to give. That is, the right kind of girl is."

"Gosh, she's trying to help me with Pat," Barry thought.

The upshot was that Pat took Peg and the youngster to Southampton the next morning. "Peter suggested it," she told Barry. "And, of course, you're right—I do owe them something."

It wasn't the debt that did it, Barry realized. It was Jacky. Peg wanted Patricia to see him, and the house was so near. There really wasn't any good excuse for not going. So, for the first time in her life, Pat snifled fish in an entrance hall, and tripped on worn stair carpets, and found herself stifling in a back room without air or sunshine. She'd known people lived like that, of course, but, somehow, she'd never thought much about it. She found herself thinking now. "If I had to spend one night in this place—That's what's the matter with the boy."

It was arranged that Evans was to drive them out, and come back for Barry on Thursday.

When Barry left Pat at her hotel, she said, "You seem to be everybody's friend, Mr. Gilbert. It's a little hard to understand, considering—"

"Considering that I'm an adventurer and an impostor?"

"Yes."

"Yes," Barry repeated, "but that's how you learn what friendship means."

That night, Barry went to the Coconut Bar.

"I mustn't overlook anything," he reflected.

There wasn't much to overlook in the Coconut Bar. Not in the way of clothing, at all events. The lobby was full of men, more or less surreptitiously glancing at framed photographs of girls whose costumes might almost have been packed in a vanity case. Inside was a square dancing floor with tables about it. Like the seats about a prize ring. Above, there was a balcony with more tables, except at one spot, occupied by officers.

There were three shows a night, the amateur Hawkeham discovered from his menu at seven, eleven, and one.

It wasn't hard to get acquainted with any of the girls. One had only to look prosperous, and incline his head an inch or two in the direction of a vacant chair. "We're not supposed to do this," Violet Fane informed Barry, but Luis's got a special station."

Barry had the expense account and his maintaining grin, and used both to the limit. It wasn't long before the people were telling the story of his life. "I bin with Luis over since I was a kid," she bragged. "I'm a swell now. You oughta know him. I'll give you a tumble after the next show."

Luis was just affable. A gentleman, but a business man, with a keen eye to spenders, and a glittering contempt for tight coats.

A flunky going fellow, Morano was, who wore spartan clothes, and much jewelry. Slim and dapper, his intelligence was slicked back from his forehead. He had a long, thin nose, and straight, thin lips, and a slight, rather curious impudency in his speech. His voice could be very soft at times.

"Tender hearted, Luis is," Miss Fane declared later. "I've seen him cry when somebody sang about mother or the let or sunup. That loved her and lost her stuff, especially. He was married once."

"Didn't it take?"

"Sure it took. That's why he cries. The Jane died, or sunup. Know what Luis did—when he got the cash, I mean? Bought the house they used to live in, and went on living there alone, with a couple of servants."

"Good."

"About that romantic? I'll say so! He's got the servants, and there all around to a farm, and a house on Jersey, a couple's house. Would you believe it—" he drives out every morning, after the last show. Nuts about horses, Luis is. Not to bet on. Just likes 'em."

"Learned about horses in Fauquier county," Luis said, returning at that instant. "I lived there 'til I was nineteen, and that's all they know. Go on, VI; you'll be late."

"I never was late for a show yet," she retorted. "Nor out of a show in all the years I've worked for you."

"That's straight," Morano admitted, as she was leaving. "Never bin out of a show in her life. She's a swell girl, VI."

There wasn't much to be got at the Coconut Bar; not that Violet and Morano weren't willing to talk. Morano's romance had left him a gentle melancholy—or, perhaps, he was only worried about business. But, if he had anything to conceal, it certainly seemed to have no relation to Kelly. On that subject everything was open and above board.

"Just a gorilla," Morano said of the Big Boss, the next night, when Barry returned to the Coconut Bar.

"Oh, Mike was a right," Miss Fane protested.

"Sure!" her employer agreed. "He wouldn't do nothing worse than steal pennies from a dead baby. Pat of VI's though," Luis added, winking at Barry.

"Yeh," Violet declared, dryly; "until that Barclay dame came along."

"He was in here that evening, wasn't he?" Barry asked.

"Yeh. Just a few hours before they croaked him."

"He had a girl pinched, or something?"

"Yeh," Morano repeated. "Nice kid, too. Took her around to the station in them things."

"I don't blame the Jane's husband for getting sore," Morano continued, "though bumping a guy off for that's going a little too far."

"Kelly was soused," Miss Fane said.

"Yeh. Plenty. And he thought the kid was pickin' his pocket. Nothin' to it."

"Wanting my time," Barry told Harwood, the next morning, in the city editor's busy office at The Globe.

"My time, and nearly a hundred dollars of the paper's money. Winslow had it straight. The Fane girl was strutting her stuff from one o'clock until long after the murder."

"Well, it's good to be sure."

"Yes, and I'm mighty sure now. Every step I've taken since our last meeting leads right up to Mrs. Kelly."

Harwood looked at him quizzically.

"Step No. 1?" he asked.

"My advertisement offering a reward for the number of the cab that killed that artist's wife."

"You don't mean that you got it?"

"Triumphantly, Barry opened his note book.

"There it is," he said. "026017. The figures under it are the number of the driver who gave me the information."

Ernie copied both numbers.

"Swell work," he commented.

"Anything else?"

Lots. This fellow had a passenger who got out at Twenty-third street around midnight. When the cabman was asked two hours later—the driver bumped into him again in Sixteenth street, very much rattled, and looking as though he'd committed a murder."

"Any description?"

"Rather a vague one. That doesn't matter. I'm sure, in my own mind that this passenger was the caller Kelly expected, and that he wasn't the murderer. I'm equally sure that he knew murder had been committed."

"Let's call it a mere supposition. In that case, Kelly was killed around two o'clock. At two o'clock, Mrs. Kelly went to Harlem."

"How do you know that?"

Barry's answer was a full report of his adventures of Saturday.

"Without Step No. 1, Step No. 2 means nothing. In other words, if Kelly'd been killed at midnight—which is the theory every one's worked on Mrs. Kelly's alibi would have been blown off."

Harwood took his finger tips in an almost prayerful gesture. "I wish we could find the guy who looked as though he'd committed a murder."

Barry nodded, deeply.

"There's also the trouble," the city editor said. "What kind of a chance to see Luis Morano?"

Tough?"

"On the contrary. Cries over a mammy song."

"There's a heap of 'em do," Harwood philosophized.

"He's a Southerner, with a soft voice, and a funny impediment in his speech?"

"That so?" Harwood inquired.

"Where is this Coconut Bar?"

Barry told him, and promptly returned to Mrs. Kelly. "How the deuce are we going to prove what she did after she got home?"

"That's up to you," Ernie said. "I'm off on a new tack now." His eyes twinkled. "One that would go a long way toward establishing your theory of coincidence. Gosh, I'd give my new uppers to break this story within the next week or two."

Thursday evening, Barry spent in his room, mostly thinking. He had telephoned Pat twice since their luncheon together, and found her enthusiastic over her guests.

"There's nothing wrong with the boy," she declared; "nothing that a few weeks out here won't cure. He's on the beach now, with his mother."

Judge Hambridge had taken to the little fellow at once. Almost like having a grandchild. It kept his mind off his worries. And no one could see Peggy, being brave, but always staring at nothing, always thinking of what might happen, without pity that warmed into affection. "She's really an awfully good sort," Pat said, from Southampton. "I like her a lot. When are you coming out?"

"Tomorrow, I hope."

"Well, we'll expect you for dinner."

That branch was healed, all right. Pat had called him "the scum of the earth." In the same hour, he remembered again, he had told her he loved her. As to that, she still maintained silence. "That's the kindest thing she could do," Barry thought. "A Judge's daughter, and I—"

Barry had learned not to think of the future. "Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum," as his own father had put it. Just for now, it was pleasant to be somebody who knew Pat—and he wanted to take that awful look out of the other girl's eyes. "That oughtn't to be hard now," Barry thought. "If I could get that Filipino to talk. He knows when Mrs. Kelly came home, and he's probably got a darned good idea what she did afterward. If we could get to that Oriental—"

At which point, Evans came, and he had been drinking.

"Sorry, sir," he apologized, taking the nearest chair. Evans had none of Willett's compunctions.

"Sorry, sir, but I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur."

"Liquid nourishment?"

"Yes, sir," Evans admitted, sheepishly. "But that was the only chance I had with that Irishman."

"Well?"

"Well, I drove Miss Hambridge, and Mrs. Rogers, and the boy to Southampton, like you said. And I started back today. It was nearly eight when I made the garage, and I was good and hungry."

"There's a decent cafe a few yards away. Nolan—That's Kelly's chauffeur—was sitting at a table, with a load he ought to've gone twice for."

Evans smiled.

"Ed had a grouse on women in general. And he was chowed plenty. I hadn't been with him long when he opened up on Mrs. Kelly. There's something queer between her and this Filipino, he says."

"Charlie?"

"That isn't his name, but let it go at that. And, when Ed said 'queer,' he didn't mean anything wrong. Just some kind of an understanding. Mrs. Kelly's been giving the Chink coin and jewelry, regular. Charlie showed him some of it, Ed says."

"Well, the night of the murder Nolan drives Kelly to the Coconut Bar. And home—at nine o'clock. When he gets out at his house, Kelly says, 'Put the car in the garage. Mrs. Kelly's gone up to Harlem, and I won't need you 'til tomorrow morning.'"

"Ed obeys orders. He goes back to Kelly's, and sits in the kitchen. This Chink is in the butter's pantry getting a tray ready. And, while the two of 'em are down there, the damndest row starts up—"

"Rogers and Kelly."

"No. This was around nine o'clock Mrs. Kelly She was laying Mike out so you could have heard

Ernie Copied Both Numbers.

It a blocks. Well, this goes on ten or fifteen minutes, and then the bell from the parlor rings. Charlie starts upstairs with the tray. He gets up two steps, when Kelly appears at the head of the flight. "Come up here, you lousy spy. Come up here while I tell you where you get off!"

"Charlie sets down the tray, and goes. Nolan follows into the pantry, and has a stiff drink. Then he sits down again, and listens to Kelly laying out the Chink."

"Could he hear anything? Word? I mean?"

"No. Just Kelly's voice. Mrs. Kelly was out of it. She'd gone to her room, Nolan thinks. But Kelly made noise enough for two. And, after another ten minutes or so, Charlie comes back.

"I'm fired," Charlie says—in the Chink lingo. "I got to get out. Quick, blunkety-blunk told me to go quick or he'd kill me!"

"Are you going?" Nolan asks.

"Sure," the Chink says. "I got to get my money first. He chased me out of the room when I asked for it, but I'm going back," the Chink says.

"Nolan then took the cook to a movie, and when they got back everything's quiet. It's after midnight, because these two waited home. Kelly's upstairs, talking to somebody, and the Chink's in his room, packing and muttering to himself something frightful. So Nolan says good night to the cook who goes into her room, and then Nolan slips into the pantry, and takes another shot of that hootch."

"What hootch?"

"The rye whiskey I was telling you about."

Barry sprang from his chair.

"The rye whiskey?"

"Sure. And it was in a cut-glass decanter."

"Are you certain?"

"Nolan is. And he's just as certain that it was still in the pantry when the guy upstairs left."

"Why?"

"Because he heard the front door close ten seconds before he was out the back way."

"Gosh!" Barry exclaimed. "That puts it up to Mrs. Kelly, all right. Evans shook his head, drunkenly. "Mrs. Kelly wasn't home," he said. "She went to her sister's after the high jinks in Harlem, and Nolan got her there the next morning before they called the police. There were only three people in that house after the guy went who was visiting Kelly—Kelly himself, cook, and a mighty mad Chinaman."

"Filipino."

"Whatever he was, he was mad, and the decanter that killed Kelly was downstairs with him until just about the time Kelly was killed."

"Thanks," Barry nodded. "I think we've got something."

"Oh, I forgot to give you this. It came—to Southampton—just as I was leaving," said Evans.

"This" was a cablegram. About in the smoke-filled room, Barry opened it. Nine words. "Father and I sailing for home Sunday. Love Mother."

For an instant, he stood, frozen the wire in his hand.

Directly before him, an evening newspaper lay open on the table.

"Outgoing passenger and mail ships," he read. "Sailing tomorrow—Steamship Orange Nassau for Port au Prince, La Guayra, Coracao, Maracaibo, Carupano, at Pampatar. I'm on my way to end of 'em tomorrow."

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

In silent resignation we again pay tribute to our honored dead. There are many soldiers sleeping their last long rest here at Union Ceme-ttery, veterans of the Civil War. A marble stone marks the resting place of William Silver, who died in action during the great World War, and for whom the Jackson-

Silver Post, bears the name of Silver. All those who wear a poppy will know they are doing this bit in memory and honor of this war's dead, and helping the disabled living. Let us all resolve that there will not be even one soldier's grave of any of our wars left undecorated on this Memorial Day. This is so very little for what they gave!

Ted Roberts and Earl Swinton of the National Guard at Norway, have joined the regular army and are stationed at present at Fort Williams, Portland.

Gerald Radcliff and family are staying at the home of his father, Thomas Radcliff, for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Cummings and Mrs. Alanson Cummings and daughter Catherine were Sunday evening birthday guests of Gerald Davis. Two beautiful birthday cakes were among the gifts received.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coffin and children of Greenwood were Sun- day guests of his sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coffin.

Mrs. Florence Benson is working in Penley's Mill at West Paris again for a short time.

MISS CLEMENTS' PUPILS IN DANCE RECITAL AT MEXICO NEXT WEEK

Miss Bertha Clement, local dancing instructor, will present her pupils in the annual Spring Recital to be held at the St. Rocco Hall, Friday June 2, at eight p. m.

This year the recital is a combination of Miss Clements' Rumford, Mexico and Bethel pupils, and promises to be an exceedingly brilliant and beautiful demonstration of dancing technique. All types of dancing will be featured including the modernistic, aesthetic, acrobatic, tap, toe, interpretive, folk and ballet.

As an added attraction Miss Clement has secured the services of Eddie Goudreau and his "R. K. Orchestra" of Portland Goudreau is remembered for his ability in vaudeville houses throughout New England. Each man in the orchestra is a trained and capable vaudeville musician. Music for the dance following the recital will be furnished by the same group.

This recital will be presented in Bethel at a later date.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY Sunday School at 10 o'clock. Services Sunday morning at 10:45. "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, May 31, 1933. The Golden Text is: "They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy." (Jonah 2:8).

Among the citations from the Bible is the following: "Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity: Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words." (Ps. 64:2,3). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The heavenly law is broken by trespassing upon man's individual right of self government. We have no authority in Christian Science and no moral right to attempt to influence the thoughts of others, except it be to benefit them" (Para. 447:1-5).

MRS. FRANCES E. BARTON (The Christian Leader)

Mrs. Frances E. Barton, widow of Rev. Frank E. Barton, died at her home in Rockport, Mass., on Wednesday, May 6, from the effects of a weakened heart. Mrs. Barton, a native of Brownfield, Maine, was the daughter of John and Caroline M. (Thomas) Fogg. She had been during the last 25 years a resident of Rockport, where Mr. Barton, previous to his death seven years ago, had a pastorate of 18 years. Before coming to Massachusetts, Mr. and Mrs. Barton had lived for many years in Bethel, Maine, where Mr. Barton had a long and happy pastorate. During the latter years of the residence in Bethel, Mr. Barton was the Maine Superintendent of Universalist Churches.

Of her own family, Mrs. Barton leaves a son, Frank E. Barton, Jr., M. D., of West Newton, Mass., a member of the staff of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospital; and a daughter, Mrs. Charles L. Haskell of Holyoke, a writer and public lecturer. There is a brother of Mrs. Barton, Fred Fogg, living in Portland, and a sister, Mrs. Belle S. Howard, in Brownfield, Maine.

Funeral services were held at the home in Rockport, at 2 p. m. Saturday, May 9. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Leroy W. Coons, D. D., Superintendent of Massachusetts Churches, a long-time, close friend of the family, and Rev. George Mayo Gerrish, pastor of the Rockport Universalist church. Interment was in Beech Grove Cemetery, Rockport, where Mr. Gerrish had the committal service.

MILTON

Several families are having the German measles.

Florus Poland and family were callers at Charles Cone's, Sunday. Joe Jackson and wife of Auburn were week end visitors at Clarence Jackson's.

A Finnish family of Woodstock have moved on to the Clinton Buck farm.

Bert Davis has sold the place known as the D. C. Swett place to a man in Rumford.

Mr. and Mrs. Alf Clifford of Portland were Sunday callers at Adelle Lapham's.

Roosevelt Delano and family have moved to the Pratt farm.

FATAL ACCIDENTS

Miss Jeannette V. Soule, 18, old daughter of Charles Frances Bartlett Soule of Rumford was instantly killed early Saturday morning when the motorcycle which she was passenger crashed into a tree on the Abbott's road. It was reported at the sheriff's office that the speedometer reading was 84 miles per hour.

John D. MacPherson, 23, of Rumford was instantly killed early Saturday morning when the car, in which he was riding was crowded the road by another car crashed into the fence and crete bridge over Barker Brook. The car was driven by Raymond Breton. The accident occurred about a mile from the place where Miss Soule lost her life Saturday morning. Mr. MacPherson was son of Mr. and Mrs. John MacPherson of Mexico. He was graduated from Mexico High School in 1931 where he was an outstanding athlete.

Miss Irene Perry, 25, of Rumford, another passenger of the car, died at the Rumford Community Hospital, Tuesday morning.

Miss Florine Bean is spending the week with friends in Camden.
